An Eye For Business.
It is not alone in America that barbers show extraordinary persistence and ingenuity in pressing their wares upon customers. An American who has been traveling in France relates that in Paris the barber who was shaving him stepped two or three times upon the side of his foot.
At last the customer called out:
"Please don't do that any more! I have a corn."
"Exactly what I was trying to find out, monsieur," said the barber blandly. "We have an excellent preparation for removing corns, for sale at a franc per bottle."—Youth's Companion.

Force of Habit.
"Head a little more to the left, please."—Truth.
For Appearance Sake.
Her face wore a stony look, and her breast was yet untasted.
Her lip curled scornfully as her husband helped himself to pancakes the second time.
"Terwilliger!"
Her voice was harsh as her aspect was forbidding.
"If you haven't any consideration for my feelings, why can you not?"
She struggled with a sob and triumphed.
"Have some regard for appearances!"
"My dear!"
Her husband reached for the syrup impudently.
"I assure you I have the highest regard for appearances."
"For instance," she sneered, "when you kissed the hired girl in the hall last night."
"Certainly. Didn't I exclaim, loud enough for the people in the next three flats to hear me, 'My darling wife, how I love you!'"
She felt herself powerless to contravert his position.—Detroit Tribune.

In Doubt.
He (the bridegroom at the World's fair)—Do you want to go to the Art building, dear?
She (the bride)—Do you?
He—I do if you do.
She—If you do, I do, dear.
He—Just as you say.
She—Do, dear, take your choice.
He—Well, I don't want to unless you want to.
She—I don't want to unless you want to. (With solicitude) Do you want to?
He—If you want to, dearest.
She (timidly)—Well, let's go?
He—Are you sure you want to go?
She—If you are.
He (timidly)—Well, let's go.
(Exeunt absentmindedly toward the stock pavilion.)—Chicago Record.

Fraternal.
"You're a nice editor, Chubb!"
"What's the matter now?"
"Why, you say the publisher of The Daily Voice is an unmitigated ass."
"Well, he is."
"But you add, 'We advise our brother journalist to reform his stupid ways.'"
—Tit-Bits.

Knew What It Was.
"Absalom, my son, what was that note the messenger just brought you?" inquired old man Clamwhooper.
"Nothing in particular, father, only a billet doux from a friend."
"Indeed! How much did he say there was dough?"—Texas Sittings.

Simple.
President Life Insurance Company—Make a note to fire the young man who has charge of sending floral pillows to the funerals of deceased policy holders.
Secretary—What has he done?
President—Sent one inscribed "His gain is our loss."—Truth.
It Helped Him.
"Good morning, Uncle Charles. Did you sleep well? I'm afraid your bed was rather hard and uneven, but—"
"Oh, it was all right, thank you. I got up now and then during the night and rested a bit, you know!"—Tit-Bits.

AT THE WORLD'S FAIR.
John Henry had rented a couple of chairs. And Susan and he had sat down To gaze at the lovely, bewildering things Which give the White City renown.
John Henry and Susan were deeply in love. And what are White Cities to those Whose pulsating hearts the low setting sun Shines on as it shone when it rose?
Perhaps for a moment, or less it might be. They gazed on the beautiful sight; Then they gazed on each other with all of their eyes And forgot the great city of white.
To them they were visions more lovely than all The city contained in its bounds, And the sound of each voice was sweeter to them Than all of the White City's sounds.
They bled and they cooed in their innocent way. Regardless of what might be said; John Henry held on to her dear little hand And looked on the cheeks that were red.
"Look not on the wine when it's red," so they say;
It might quite as well be unsaid. For the matter of that, if temptation is meant, It is nothing to cheeks that are red.
John Henry looked once, and then once again, And Susan looked smilingly back; "Gee-whillikins Moses!" John Henry exclaimed, And Susan was kissed with a smack.
"Let up on that, now," came a voice of command. And a guard fluttered down on the pair. "You cannot do that on the grounds, don't you know? It belongs to a concessionaire!"
John Henry jumped up, and he reached for the guard. "By gravity!" he yelled as he slammed The guard on the ground. "I'll not have it, I won't; if I do, I'll be d—d!"
He seizes the tyrannical foot on the neck Of his foe, John H. was a sight To behold, and the people who happened that way Applauded with trembling delight.
The star spangled banner floats high in the breeze.
John shouted, "and I want to see The son of a gun of a concessionaire Who can keep Susan's kisses from me."
"I paid my good money to come to this show, And Susan came, too, for a sight, And if I want to kiss her, and she wants me to, Who says that I ain't got the right?"
Like the roar of the ocean, the rounds of applause Began upon John, then and there, As he let up the guard, kissed his Susan once more And took in the rest of the fair.
—New York Sun.

Only For a Time.
"I reckon Simon Jenks has lost his reason facilities since he had that last spell of sickness, don't you?" inquired Mr. Hanson of his gentle faced wife.
"How old is y'r Cousin Simon?" asked placid Mrs. Hanson, who had been listening to a long story about the old gentleman's shortcomings and peculiarities since the recent illness.
"Eighty-two come next September," said Mr. Hanson after a reflective pause.
"Oh, well, he ain't so old as he might be by a good deal," said Mrs. Hanson cheerfully. "I shouldn't feel to call it that folks had lost their reason facilities at his age. Easy, but y'r Cousin Simon's case," she added, seen a malicious expression on her husband's face, "p'rhaps, take it by an large, you might say that Simon's facilities was mislaid for the time being."—Youth's Companion.

He Understood.
Young Rorty—What do you mean when you say you are a gentleman because you are not in business?
Old Rorty—I mean, sir, that to be a gentleman I must have no business.
Young Rorty—Ah, I understand now! You mean that you have no business to be a gentleman.—Brooklyn Life.

Retrospective.
"Ah! She may put on airs now, but I can remember the time when she didn't have no horse or carriage."—Life.

Where It Comes In.
Mr. Ghout—All my money cannot give me health, doctor!
Dr. Bolus—No, perhaps not, but it is of inestimable value nevertheless. It gives your physician great confidence.—Truth.

Not to Him.
Jones—It's very amusing to see those ladies across the street looking at the bonnets in that window.
Brown—Amusing! Why, that's my wife and daughter.—Brooklyn Life.

Now Try This
It will cost you nothing and will surely do you good if you have a cough, cold or any trouble with throat, chest or lungs. Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds is guaranteed to give relief or money will be paid back. Sufferers from La Grippe found it just the thing and under its use had a speedy and perfect recovery. Try a sample bottle at our expense and learn for yourself just how good a thing it is. Trial bottles free at A. R. Penny's drug store. Large size 50 cents and $1.
Specimen Cases.
S. H. Clifford, New Cassel, Wis., was troubled with Neuralgia and Rheumatism; his stomach was disordered, his liver was affected to an alarming degree, appetite fell away and he was terribly reduced in flesh and strength. Three bottles of Electric Bitters cured him.
Edward Shepherd, Harrisburg, Ill., running sore on his leg of eight years' standing. Used three bottles of Electric Bitters and seven boxes of Bucklen's Arnica Salve and his leg is sound and well. John Speaker, Catawba, O., had five large fever sores on his leg; doctors said he was incurable. One bottle of Electric Bitters and one box Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured him entirely. Sold by A. R. Penny, druggist.

MANUFACTURED ICE,
For these reasons: First, it is made by a home institution. Second, the ice is absolutely and chemically pure, being made from spring water, which is first distilled and then carefully filtered before being frozen. Third, Artificial Ice will last much longer than pond ice. Fourth, an epidemic of cholera is looked for during the year and nothing is so apt to produce or spread this disease as impure water or ice. Fifth, it will be
